and that proper steps may be taken to carry the same into effect.

(Signed) U. S. GRANT, President.

HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

And, whereas, on the 3d day of June, 1876, the County Court of Iron county, Missouri, made an order as follows:

It is ordered by the Court that Hon. J. W. Emerson and T. P. Russell be and are hereby appointed a committee to prepare a history of Iron county since its organization, in compliance with the Proclamation of President of the United States, dated 25th of May, 1876, and that they be served with a copy of this order duly authenticated;

And afterwards, on the 10th day of June, 1876, at a public meeting of the citizens held for the purpose of taking steps to duly celebrate the Centennial 4th of July, Capt. C. R. Peck was appointed to assist in the collection of historical summary;

We, the undersigned committee, thus constituted, beg to present the following historical summary:

Iron County

came into existence by an act of the Legislature, approved Feb. 17th, 1857, and was formed from territory taken from the counties of Wayne, Reynolds, Madison, Washington, Dent and St. Francois.

Major John Polk, Representative of Madison county, but residing within the limits of the proposed new county, Hon. C. C. Zeigler, of Ste. Genevieve county, member of the State Senate, and James Lindsay, Enrolling Clerk of the Senate, were principally instrumental in the passage of the act. Great difficulty was found in procuring the necessary territory without reducing other counties below their constitutional limits, as well as the ratio of representation; hence the peculiar shape of the county.

The act provided for the election officers, and the selection of a county site, which took place on the first Monday in June, 1857, and resulted in the election of J. V. Logan, John W. Miller and Moses Edmunds, justices of the county court; John F. T. Edwards, clerk of the county and circuit courts; John Cole, sheriff.

H. N. Tong and David Carson, who were doing a mercantile business at the eastern base of Shepherd Mountain, in what was then known as the Shepherd Valley, negotiated the purchase of lands from Cyrus Russell, Sr., William Russell, and A. B. Guild and wife, and proceeded to survey and lay off a town, which they named IRONTON, and entered it on the list with Arcadia, Pilot Knob, and Middlebrook, as competing points for the location of the county seat. Neither place at this election received a majority.

The first meeting of the county court was held in Arcadia, on the 4th of August, 1857, and organized by electing John V. Logan, president. Then the county was divided into convenient Townships and Road Districts, and the court made the appointment of township and other officers also, the ordering of another election for the location of the county seat, which took place on the 7th of September, 1857, and resulted in the selection of IRONTON.

Messrs. Tong & Carson having very generously given to the county alternate lots in Ironton, they were sold at public sale by Samuel A. Reyburn, commissioner of the seat of justice, and realized to the county the sum of $10,602.00.

An order was made for the erection of a courthouse. And in April, 1858, contract was awarded to George S. Evans and William F. Mitchell, for the sum of $14,000, and Hon. John V. Logan appointed superintendent.

The corner stone for said building was laid with appropriate ceremonies on the 4th of July, 1858, and in the stone were placed the Declaration of Independence, a copy of the Ironton Furnace, a Free Soil newspaper then published in Ironton by James Lindsay, beside many other articles, including various U. S. coins. The courthouse was completed and occupied in October, 1860.

The first term of the circuit court was held in Iron county in May, 1858, Judge John H. Stone, presiding.

The United State Land Office was removed from Jackson, Missouri, to Ironton in 1861, by order of the Department at Washington, D. C., James Lindsay, Register, and C. R. Peck, Receiver, making the removal of Records, Plats, &c. Since then they have been succeeded by John A. Miller, Wm. H. Winfield, John Donaldson and Wm. G. Dilts, Registers, and Robert E. Craig, Thomas Holladay, J.

Lewis Moser and Llewellyn Davis, Receivers.

The St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad was completed to Pilot Knob in 1857. Its completion was celebrated with appropriate ceremonies, speeches, firing of cannon, &c. The terminus remained at Pilot Knob until 1871, when it was extended through the county southward, forming connections with Arkansas and Texas, opening up and giving the southern portion of the county better market facilities, new towns springing up and post offices being established.

In 1865 the county court ordered the building of a county jail. Plans and specifications furnished by B. Shepherd, of Ironton. Contract awarded in 1866 to Johnson and Flynn, for the sum of $8,972.50. Completed in 1866, and bonds of the county were successfully negotiated to raise the necessary funds, at about par.

NEWSPAPERS.

The following newspapers have been published in Iron county since its organization:

The Furnace, a Free Soil paper was established in 1858, James Landsay editor and proprietor, discontinued in 1861, in consequence of the Rebellion.

The Baptist Journal, a religious paper established in 1859 by Rev. William Polk editor and proprietor, discontinued in 1861, in consequence of the Rebellion.

The Arcadia Prospect, a Democratic paper established in August, 1859, in Arcadia, W. L. Faber, editor, and A. Coulter, publisher. Afterward removed to Ironton, and discontinued in 1861, in consequence of the Rebellion.

The Ironton Forge, a Radical Republican paper, established in Ironton in 1865, upon the "Furnace" office material. Eli D. Ake, editor. Office sold in 1866 and turned into

The South-east Missouri Enterprise, a Republican paper, G. A. and J. L. Moser, editors and proprietors. Discontinued in the fall of 1873 in consequence of ill health and subsequent death of J. L. Moser, one of the editors.

The Review, a Democratic paper, established in May, 1866, by R. E. Craig, editor. Office sold and name changed to

The Iron County Register, in July, 1867, continuing Democratic in politics, edited by Thomas Essex and W. H. Winfield, and by them sold in May, 1869, to Eli D. Ake and C. K. Miller. Again changing hands in June, 1871, Eli D. Ake becoming sole proprietor, who still continues its publication as a Democratic paper.

The Liberal, a paper "Liberal" in politics, established and run as a campaign paper during the campaign of 1870. Robert L. Lindsay, editor.

The Commonwealth, established on the "Enterprise" office material in 1874. An independent religious-political paper; Crawford and Duncan, editors. Ran only a few months and discontinued in consequence of a disagreement between the editors.

POST-OFFICES.

The first post-office within the territory now known as Iron county was established in 1839. Up to that time the nearest post-office was Caledonia, to which point the mails came once each week. Farmington, Fredericktown, Greenville and Van Buren were the nearest offices in other directions.

Just prior to the date named, Col. Cyrus Russell had prepared and forwarded to the Post Master General a petition praying the establishment of a post-office in Arcadia Valley, so named after the Valley. It was so established, he agreeing to carry the mail for $119 per annum, or less if the office should not earn that sum. Theodore Russell was mail carrier and Henry P. Russell was postmaster. No other offices were established until the opening of the railroad to Pilot Knob. Since then offices have been established as follows:

Annapolis, Charles Hart, postmaster; Arcadia, S. R. Harveill, postmaster; Belleview, Wm. W. Reyburn, postmaster; Carsonville, William P. Adams, postmaster; Des Arc, Charles H. Collins, postmaster; Graniteville, F. Rodach, postmaster; Good Water, D. S. Love, postmaster; Ironton, C. R. Peck, postmaster; Kaolin, Samuel Quisenberry, postmaster; Middlebrook, August Boss, postmaster; McNail, B. S. McNail, postmaster; Ozark, John W. Berryman, postmaster; Rocky Glade, John C. Pindel, postmaster, discontinued; Pilot Knob, P. H. Jaquith, postmaster; Marble Creek, Hon. John Polk, postmaster, discontinued; Hogan Mountain, Holloman, postmaster, discontinued.

SCHOOLS.

The first report of the condition of the Public School of the county was made in 1860, of which the following is a comparative statement, showing the difference between 1860 to 1870:

There were Public Schools within the territory of which Iron county was organized before its organization, but we have no official data in relation to them.

Separate schools are now provided for colored children. There is but one now in the county, and that is located in Ironton.

ARCADIA COLLEGE.

This institution of learning, situated about one mile south of Ironton, in the town of Arcadia, was founded by the Rev. J. C. Berryman in 1847. It was styled "Arcadia High School," and ran under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South.

The school was a grand success, and sent out its graduates and students annually through the surrounding country, some of whom may be found filling positions of eminence and trust in almost every county in Southeast Missouri. There was a short interruption during the war. Prof A. C. Farnham left the school, (having purchased it a short time before the war), and it reverted to Mr. Berryman under a deed of trust.

At the earnest solicitation of General C. B. Fisk, (in 1863), then Commanding the Post, Mr. Berryman re-opened the school and continued it until 1867, when Peter Dilts, Esq., became the purchaser of the institution.

In 1869 Rev. L. M. Lewis purchased the school, and by the liberal donations of citizens, erected the new brick building. But, becoming embarrassed financially, he sold the property to a joint stock company composed of citizens who had furnished most of the means to build the new edifice. From that time the institution, by an amended charter, became "Arcadia College," endowed with a liberal charter, conferring collegiate and manufacturing powers.

In 1875, Prof. C. O. Jones, the present owner, became the purchaser and is now managing the institution. The property has cost over $40,000, and consists, in addition to the beautiful college grounds, with excellent springs of pure water and groves, of an old and new building. The latter is a four-story brick edifice, 60 by 120 feet, very substantial, with mansard roof, and when completed will be one of the largest buildings used for school purposes in Southeast Missouri.

The following teachers have taught in the institution, viz:

Rev. J. C. Berryman, principal; Mrs. Margaret Berryman, governess; Prof. A. C. Farnham, A. M.; Rev. John T. Pierce, D. D.; Mrs. Martha H. Pierce, Mrs. L. Maloy, Rev. W. B. GENERAL REMARKS.

Up to the Centennial year, 1876, but little mineral developments have been made, except in iron; and in this metal, operations have been confined almost entirely to Pilot Knob a cone-shaped mountain about 590 feet high, lying on the north side and adjacent to Ironton, the county-seat. The property, about 43,000 acres, is owned by a corporation at first called "The Madison Iron Mining Company," and changed to the "Pilot Knob Iron Company. In 1847 two smelting Furnaces, each of 16 to 20 tons capacity, were erected at the north base of this iron cone, and also, a Forge for making blooms and other wrought iron. The latter operated for some six or eight years, and was then discontinued. The furnaces, however, have been operated since with several important interruptions and suspensions. Up to the completion of the St. Louis & Iron Mountain railroad, in 1858, the iron manufactured was hauled by teams to Ste. Genevieve, on the Mississippi river. After the opening of the railroad from St. Louis, the shipment of ore was commenced, and during a part of the time, as many as 40 ear-loads, of ten tons each, of the ore were shipped per day, and carried to the Mississippi river at Sulphur Springs, where it was re-shipped on barges to different furnaces on the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, for smelting.

Owing to the great depression in the iron business of the country, the entire business of the Company has been suspended since 1875.

In September, 1864, during the battle of Pilot Knob, (hereafter noted), the furnaces, together with a large amount of charcoal, hay, &c., were burned by the Confederate forces under Gen. Price; but one furnace was rebuilt, and resumed operations in 1865.

At Hogan Mountain, about 5 miles south of Ironton, some 200 tons of iron ore were mined and shipped in 1874, and the work was suspended.

At an iron bank two or three miles west of Des Arc, 25 miles south of Ironton, some 500 tons of hematite ore were mined and shipped in 1873, and the work suspended.

In 1870 about 50 tons of iron ore were mined at Biser Mountain, eight or ten miles south of Ironton, and work suspended. In 1868 about one hundred tons of ore were mined at Russell's mine, on Marble Creek, about ten miles south of Ironton, and the work abandoned.

In 1874 about fifty tons of ore were mined at the Minden iron bank, about one mile east of Ironton, and the work suspended.

In 1874 several tons of ore was mined by Judge F. Dinger, F. Rodach, and others, about one mile north of Pilot Knob, and work suspended.

The Pilot Knob Iron Co. has mined considerable ore at several places on its lands, but the work on all has been suspended, although it is believed extensive deposits of ore exist at each locality named.

At many other points in the county it is believed excellent iron deposits exist, and it is hoped will be worked on the 4th of July, 1976.

Lead ore was mined—say 25 tons—in 1868, at Big Creek mines, near Des Arc, twenty-three miles south of Ironton, and the work suspended. Lead ore has been found in several other places in the county, but no developments made up to this time.

Ore said to be “tin stone,” has been found in several localities, but is at present a disputed question whether it be really tin.

Marble has been found on Marble Creek, twelve miles south of Ironton, and in 1860 some of it was quarried, and sawed in blocks for market. About the same time marble was quarried about two or three miles west of Ironton, and used in some portion of the Capitol building at Washington, D. C. It is said to be of fine quality and in extensive quantity. It exists also about four miles south of Ironton. None has been quarried since 1860.

THE GRANITE QUARRIES, about four miles northwest of Ironton, were opened in 1868, upon lands belonging to the American Iron Mountain Company, and leased by B. Gratz Brown and Phillip W. Schneider, who furnished a large portion of the granite for the St. Louis bridge, and also for public buildings in different parts of the country, among them the State House in Springfield, Ill. Phillip W. Schneider operated the same in 1874, '75 and '76, and for the United States Custom Houses in St. Louis, Missouri, and Cincinnati, Ohio—the two last contracts amounting to nearly one million dollars.

The works have been suspended recently, but hope to resume again as soon as Congress makes an appropriation to continue the work of construction.

WINE.—Up to this time the production of wine has not probably exceeded 100 gallons per annum.

In considering the progress of Iron county during the nineteen years of its existence, due allowance should be made for the four years of devastating war from 1861 to 1865, during which time its desolating ravages were here experienced with great severity. In the summer of 1861 a Confederate force under General Hardee occupied the southern portion of the county. The St. Louis and Iron Mountain Railroad, then terminating at Pilot Knob, caused this to become the headquarters of the United States Army for the Southeastern portion of the State, and was occupied by Federal forces during the entire war, varying from one to ten thousand men.

General U. S. Grant, now President of the United States, was in command as Colonel of the 21st Illinois Infantry volunteers, having his headquarters in the residence of Colonel James Lindsay, when he received his commission as Brigadier-General, and was ordered hence to Bird's Point, opposite Cairo, Illinois.

Two important forts were built in the Valley by the United States Army, in 1862 and 1863. One on the hill between Ironton and Arcadia, upon which is now located the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and named Fort Hovey, (after Col. Hovey, of the 33d Illinois Infantry, then stationed here). The other about one quarter of a mile north of the northern base of Shepherd Mountain, and about the same distance west of the western base of Pilot Knob, and named Fort Davidson, (so called after General Davidson).

On the 27th day of September, 1864, the battle of Pilot Knob was fought. General Price in command of the Confederate Army of 15,000 to 20,000 men and several field batteries, attacked the United States forces under command of General Thomas L. Ewing, consisting of about 800 troops and about 150 or 200 citizens, white and colored, who assembled at Fort Davidson and joined in its defence.

The Confederate Army attacked the Fort with great energy and spirit, but were repulsed, and after fighting nearly all day, were compelled to retire from the field, leaving from 1,200 to 1,500 dead and wounded.

During the following night, despairing of reinforcements, the United States forces blew up the Fort and successfully retreated to Rolla.

The Provost Marshal's office for the 3d Congressional District, embracing 22 counties in Southeast Missouri, was located at this place, by which many recruits were mustered into the United States service, beside the many forced in by the draft, which was in operation at the time of the battle referred to, and suspended for a time in consequence of the same.

During and following these hostilities, the citizens suffered very severely from pillage and the accompanying ravages of war. Indeed it may be said, in a word, that at the end of the war in 1865, the citizens of the county were quite generally reduced to poverty, and the farms, buildings, and other improvements, were in a wretched condition of decay and devastation.

Finally, we extend to those who may live in Iron county on the 4th of July, 1976, a fraternal greeting, wishing them Grace, peace and the enjoyment of liberty in unity, and free pursuit of happiness.
